

Known Delays

Education Verifications in China, and most countries in the region, have certain periods throughout the year in which delays occur. These are as follows:

April/May and October/November

- Delays can occur in these timeframes due to most universities and higher education institutions hold examinations and any additional staff is utilized to administer the exams; as a result, there are fewer resources to respond to verification requests. Delays periods can be extended at certain universities.

July/August

- Delays can occur during this timeframe due to the enrollment and orientation removing staff from the registrar's office that would normally be assigned to handle verification requests.

Additionally, in China, there are some colleges and universities that will only report their records directly to the Ministry of Education (MOE). Therefore, any 3rd party has to go through the MOE in order to verify any higher education the candidate may have.
